CIRM CONFIDENTIALITY POLICY for GRANTS REVIEW
WORKING GROUP Members and Staff

The California Institute for Regenerative Medicine (CIRM) is committed to maintaining confidentiality during the grant review process to protect the interests of the applicants and to encourage candor on the part of the reviewers as to the scientific and medical value of the applications being reviewed. Applicants provide confidential information to the CIRM as part of their applications and it is the obligation of those participating in the review to safeguard this information. To indicate that you accept the terms of confidentiality of CIRM scientific review, please sign the statement below.

According to CIRM policy, Working Group members must not disclose the identity of applicants and institutions that they consider. The principal investigator's name and institution, the project title and abstract will be made public for funded grants, but the contents of the applications, even in funded grants, remain confidential for the protection of the applicants.

You are not to discuss the identity of the applicants, or the contents of the applications or the Working Group discussions with anyone other than Working Group members or CIRM scientific review personnel. If you wish to discuss a technical matter related to an application with a colleague who is not on the Working Group, please do not contact the person directly, but rather notify the CIRM Working Group staff member, who will decide if the request is appropriate and contact the person directly.

All hard copy materials associated with the review that you receive or that you generate must not be shared with anyone and must be destroyed after the review is complete.

I understand the confidentiality policies of CIRM and will abide by them.
